"I was in my final year when ISIS took over my hometown, Shingal.

Kira Gusakova | LCC Made Me Hungry for Knowledge

"The majority of companies values goal-oriented people. It's not just about being ambitious,

As a result, all final exams were canceled, which meant I could not graduate from school. At the same time my dad died and we fled the town. For nine days we lived in the mountains. Later, I took the final exams when I was living in a camp. Obviously, I did not have any textbooks.”

but also about having good planning skills, discipline, and consistent performance. It’s important to ask candidates about their hobbies. When someone says that they love reading but then can’t remember the title of the last book they’ve read - the impression they make is rather clear.”
